American Studies in Greece
Newsletter of the Hellenic Association for American Studies

IN THIS ISSUE:

Prague EAAS Conference
EAAS Grants
MESEA Conference

www.enl.auth.gr/helaas
Contents

HELAAS Board 2
Editorial 3
Prague EAAS Conference: Individual Paper Reports 4
EAAS Travel Awards 6
Forthcoming Events and Conferences 7
New Members 8
Journal News – GRAMMA 8
Other News 8
HELAAS Subscriptions 8
Members’ Publications 9

HELAAS Board 2003-2005

PRESIDENT:
Savas Patsalidis, Aristotle University, Department of American Studies, School of Philosophy, Thessaloniki, GR 54 124. Fax: +30 2310 94 74 32.
E-mail: spats@enl.auth.gr

VICE-PRESIDENT:
Elena Maragou, The American College of Greece (Deree), Gravias 6, Ag. Paraskevi, GR 15342. Tel. +30 210 97 63 685.
E-mail: emaragou@panafonet.gr

SECRETARY:
Tatiani Rapatzikou, Aristotle University, Department of American Studies, School of Philosophy, Thessaloniki, GR 54 124. Fax: +30 2310 94 74 32.
E-mail: trapatz@enl.auth.gr

TREASURER:
Zoe Detsi-Diamandi, Aristotle University, Department of American Studies, School of Philosophy, Thessaloniki, GR 54 124. Fax: +30 2310 94 74 32.
E-mail: detsi@enl.auth.gr

MEMBER:
Smatie Yemenedzi-Malathouni, Aristotle University, Department of American Studies, School of Philosophy, Thessaloniki, GR 54 124. Fax: +30 2310 94 74 32. E-mail: yemene@enl.auth.gr
Editorial

For the first time in the history of HELAAS we had the announcement confirmation of the forthcoming biannual EAAS Conference to be held in 2006 in the University of Cyprus. Antonis Balasopoulos (balaso@ucy.ac.cy) will be taking care of the organisation in Nicosia. There are things to be done, but HELAAS is promising the organisation of a good and stimulating conference.

The topic proposed for the 2006 EAAS Conference in Nicosia is 'Conformism/Anti-Conformism'. All Americanists in Greece and Cyprus are strongly advised to propose workshop and/or panel topics. We are hoping that our HELAAS members will respond positively to this invite.

The programme of the 2006 EAAS Conference in Cyprus will be finalised in the next Board Meeting to be held in Cambridge during the 2005 BAAS Conference.

During the board members meeting held in Prague, it has been decided that the EAAS Newsletter will go electronic (www.eaas.info/newsletter.htm) so as to be able to reach more people.

The proceedings of the conference held in Graz, Austria, have just been published by the VU University Press in Amsterdam under the title "Nature’s Nation" Revisited. The editors of the collection, Hans Bak and Walter W. Hölbling, write that “the essays collected in this volume offer critical reconsiderations of the manifold ways in which, over time, different concepts of “nature” have affected U.S attitudes towards the land Americans have explored, settled, cultivated, exploited and, more recently, also begun to protect”.

All Americanists who are in the process of completing any books on American Literature and Culture please contact the General Editor, Rob Kroes, of the European Contributions to American Studies Series (sales@gazellebooks.co.uk).

In the near future, EAAS will have its own logo. HELAAS is looking into having its own logo as well. In addition, HELAAS has been invited to join IASA (International American Studies Association) as a national member.

Overall, the EAAS conference in Prague, whose theme was “America in the Course of Human Events: Presentations and Interpretations”, was interesting although less people than expected made it there. EAAS is inviting all its member associations to generate as many forms of co-operation between them as possible. In view of the now enlarged European Union, many board members stress the importance of gathering notes and impressions on the ways in which our study of the U.S should/can/must/might be, or objectively is, different from the efforts deployed by our colleagues in the U.S.

Professor Savas Patsalidis
spats@enl.auth.gr
Prague EAAS Conference: Individual Paper Reports

Dr Zoe Detsi-Diamanti (Aristotle University, Thessaloniki)
detsi@enl.auth.gr
The Mythical Pattern of the American Revolution: Political Ideology, Republican Rhetoric, and Manifest Destiny.

In a letter to Jefferson in 1815, quite a few years after the American Revolution, John Adams confirms the widespread view that the Revolution was primarily an ideological, constitutional struggle, not just a military, political conflict:

What do we mean by the revolution? The war? That was no part of the Revolution; it was only an effect and a consequence of it. The Revolution was in the minds of the people, and this was effected from 1760 to 1775, in the course of fifteen years before a drop of blood was shed at Lexington.

From the perspective of ideological consensus, it has been tempting to explore the ability of American society during the revolutionary period to turn its myths into power and ideology, to secure assent through language, to open up and embrace an enormous diversity of people. For the leaders of the revolution, it proved a formidable task not only to transform the cultural identity of Americans, their provincial outlook, but also to introduce an alternative discourse that would transcend social/cultural distinctions and class barriers and create a sense of national unity. For this reason, I have chosen to focus on the most popular - and most effective in the dissemination of ideas - form of writing during the revolutionary period: the propaganda plays of the Revolution, as these were shaped by the rhetoric of republican idealism as well as a powerful restructuring of the American national mythology, the myths and symbols that extended from the Puritan Edenic myth of America to the Lockean philosophy of natural law and rights. My decision to examine the patriotic plays of the American Revolution was spurred by the fact that this is the first time in American history that drama holds such a unique position, that theatrical rhetoric is converted into an instrument of state policy. After all, it has been argued by a number of scholars that these ‘dramatized’ protests provided greater appeal to the American people than any other form of writing at the time.

So, taken as an aspect of social and political history, the propaganda plays of the Revolution reflect with historical authenticity and emotional vividness colonial reactions to actual events and fully dramatize a period of turmoil. They reveal, through their various sources and influences, all the ideological strains that carried the colonies to and through the Revolution, while, at the same time, unveil the latent mutuality of fact and ideal, of the actual historical reality and the mythical pattern of America’s “manifest destiny,” her mission in the world, the profound meaning of the nation’s political regeneration.

I will try to show that the propaganda plays of the American Revolution draw extensively on the metaphors of America as the “New Eden,” the “New Canaan,” the “Land of Liberty,” while, at the same time, the thematic interplay between political debate and sermonic language opens the way for identifying America’s struggle for independence with the work of redemption. Patriotism and salvation become one in the dramatic version of the events of the revolution, thus heralding the climactic moment of the Puritan errand into the wilderness which is none other but the birth of a new nation, a new world, a new order of things.
For the writers of early patriotic drama, glorifying America’s process in the world is the first step towards developing an unassailable ideology of protest and rebellion. Much like the political language of the United States today, the patriotic plays of the Revolution build their argument on immutable grounds combining feeling and common sense, faith and effective propaganda, in an attempt to establish a sense of security and cohesion and convince the people of the inevitability of political/military action.

Dr Helena Maragou (Deree College, Athens)
emaragou@otenet.gr

Realism, Primitivism, and Ethnic Selfhood in Amy Tan’s The Bonesetter’s Daughter

Referring to the popularity of Amy Tan’s work as the “Amy Tan phenomenon,” Sauling Wong, among numerous other Chinese American critical theorists, links the author’s success to a tendency to “mis-read,” “appropriate,” and “co-optate” Asian American materials for mainstream consumption. Tan caters to the ideological interests of Anglo-America, Wong and others believe, by “repackaging Orientalism” for a white readership. Like Kingston, Hwang, and other Asian American authors, Tan has been labeled as a merely “ornamental Oriental”, whose mismanagement of Chinese history and culture fulfills the Orientalist formula and displays a suspect—even dangerous—assimilativeness.

It seems, thus, that Amy Tan’s work has to be unavoidably encountered in the context of a controversy begun with the publication of Maxine Hong Kingston’s The Woman Warrior, and formulated round the question of cultural authenticity and autobiographical accuracy. The rhetoric of representational authenticity, supported by cultural nationalist and “masculinist” critics like Frank Chin and associates, promotes belief in “the truth of the Chinese culture and history that has been carried and developed into Chinese American institutions”. Such rhetoric thinks of itself as granting voice to “the sensibility or the imagination of Chinese Americans,” while, ironically, subscribing to the Western/patriarchal theorem of mimetic representation, working as it is from the monologic center of ‘historical truth’ and an essentialized conceptualization of China and Chinese America.

In contrast, Tan’s fiction negates the notion of an authentic cultural origin and thus debunks essentialist conceptions of ethnic identity; far from affirming stereotypical, “Orientalized” versions of Chinese culture, it dislodges them by deconstructing the very concept of authenticity itself. Her work reflects theoretical awareness of the impossibility of referencing past experiences with historical accuracy, but without proclaiming at the same time the cancellation of history itself; instead, it entails a re-assessment of the concept of history in the light of its linguistic and ideological constructedness.

Thus, first of all, Tan manages to successfully raise the problematic of representation by enabling a postcolonial critique of mimesis, and, second, succeeds in proposing a literary alternative by de-essentializing ethnic categories such as “Chinese”, “American”, “East”, “West”. Her work eludes the traps of historical accuracy and ethnic definition, and instead positions self formation within the context of gender and outside the constraints of time, country, and culture. In this sense, too, Tan subverts the neo-colonial purist pursuit of authentic ethnic experience, to propose a post-colonial investigation of ethnicity that addresses the porosity of national/cultural boundaries and the continual fracturing and liquefaction of identities. At the same time, she promotes a new concept of dual identity in which the two sides of the duality are not fixed by powers beyond human agency, but are continually under construction. Tan’s discursive treatment of authenticity, and by extension historical knowledge, is discussed by reference to The Bonesetter’s Daughter (2001). The paper focuses on the various narrative strategies and tropes that orchestrate the text’s self-reflexivity, thus dissolving nationalist and masculinist conceptions of origin and historical memory.

Professor Theodora Tsimpouki (University of Athens)

tsimpouki@enl.uoa.gr

The Literature Shoptalk: “The very Best of Contemporary Fiction”: Literary Prizes and American Literary Identity

This shoptalk attempted to expand cultural theory of literary awards beyond issues of literary merit into an analysis of the market forces that determine and place limitations on new fictions. The Nobel and the Man Booker awards have been taken as examples in order to acknowledge the tendency of both prestigious awards to give way to a more balanced literary scene by taking notice of the fringe, that is the literature created outside the Western mainstream. At the same time, however, attention was paid to the politics as well as economics that determine the inclusion or exclusion of good writing from being accepted and lauded in the West. Special reference was made to the discourse of “exoticism” which can be regarded as a celebration of multiculturalism but also as a means of commodifying both the author and the product.

---

EAAS Travel Awards

Eleftheria Arapoglou (elefarapoglou@yahoo.com), Ph.D. candidate at Aristotle University of Thessaloniki, received this year’s EAAS Transatlantic Grant – one of the two kinds of travel grants EAAS offers for postgraduate students in the Humanities and Social Sciences who are registered for a higher research degree at any European University.

Arapoglou will be traveling to the Van Pelt library of The University of Pennsylvania (UPenn) to conduct research that will assist her with the revision and final editing of her dissertation. Her dissertation discusses how the travel writings of Mark Twain (in particular, The Innocents Abroad), Henry James (The American Scene) and Demetra Vaka-Brown (her travel books The Heart of the Balkans, and In the Heart of the German Intrigue) contribute to the cultural construction of “space” in the context of the early American modernist tradition. At UPenn, Arapoglou will be able to investigate the latest materials and sources related to the three writers, by using the Van Pelt library’s exceptional facilities.

The Transatlantic grant permits the holder to conduct research, which illuminates some aspect of the relationship between the U.S. and Europe, in a designated university in the U.S. The term of the grant is between three and eight weeks. Successful applicants receive a grant intended to cover travel and living expenses, on the basis of a detailed budget they submit to the grant committee. Before they apply, applicants must have ensured official, written confirmation from the host institution that they are guaranteed complete access to the library and research facilities of the institution.

Application forms are available electronically at the EAAS web-site www.eaas.info
Forthcoming Events and Conferences

International Symposium
University of Athens, Main Building, 30 Panepistimiou Av.

Humanities within the Global Paradigm: English Literature/English Studies/Cultural Studies

Speakers:
ASPASIA VELISSARIOU, University of Athens.
STATHIS GOURGOURIS, Columbia University, USA
ARISTIDES BALTAS, National Polytechnic, Athens.
JINA POLITI, Aristotle University, Thessaloniki
BRUCE ROBBINS, Columbia University, U.S.A.
WILLIAM V. SPANOS, State University of New York at Binghamton.
SCOTT WILSON, Lancaster University, U.K.

For more information call 210-72 77 771 or email pelkab@enl.uoa.gr

MESEA (Multi-Ethnic Studies of Europe and the Americas), May 20-23, 2004.
Aristotle University, School of English, Department of American Literature and Culture.

Ethnic Communities, Democratic Societies.

For more information contact:
Professor Yiorgos Kalogeras
kalogera@enl.auth.gr

Fulbright Association in Greece
October 8-10, 2004.
Athens.

Humanism in Action: Olympism and the Fulbright Spirit.

For more information contact:
Professor Anastasia Papakonstantinou
apapoko@enl.uoa.gr

One-day Symposium
History Centre, Billy Megaron, Ippodromiou Square, Thessaloniki.

American Poetry in Greece

Speakers:
LIANA SAKELI-KOUKOS, University of Athens.
EKATERINI GEORGIOU, Aristotle University, Thessaloniki.
TATIANI RAPATZIKOU, Aristotle University, Thessaloniki.
DAVID CONNOLLY, Aristotle University, Thessaloniki.
HARIS VLAVIANOS, Translator, Poet, Thessaloniki.
KATERINA AGGELAKI-ROUKA, Translator, Poet, Thessaloniki.
DON SCHOFIELD, University LaVerne, Athens.

For more information contact:
Dr Tatiani Rapatzikou (trapatz@enl.auth.gr)

New Members

Dr Konstantinos Blatanis teaches Language at the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki. His research interests are: contemporary American Drama and Popular Culture. kblatanis@yahoo.gr.

Dr Artemis Michailidou teaches American Literature at the University of Athens. Her research interests are: twentieth century American Women’s Poetry. arorm@yahoo.co.uk

Dr Kyriakos Kouveliotis teaches at Deree College, Athens, International Business and Management. His research interests are: Conflict Resolution and Crisis Management European; Integration and International Relations.
kouvel@hol.gr

Journal News - GRAMMA

Gramma is on line: genesis.ee.auth.gr/dimakis/gramma/gramma.html

CFP for Gramma 13.

For more information contact:
Assistant Professor Antonis Balasopoulos balaso@ucy.ac.cy
Professor Yiorgos Kalogeras kalogera@enl.auth.gr

Other News

EAAS Travel Grants
Information can be obtained by visiting the EAAS Homepage: http://www.let.uu.nl/eaas

Join the EAAS Distribution List for topical information. In order to subscribe send the message “subscribe eaas-1” to majordomo@let.uu.nl. In order to contribute to the discussion send messages to eaas-1@let.uu.nl

HELAAS Subscriptions

Please note our new bank account details:
PIRAEUS BANK 5202-019107-604

You are all kindly requested to update or renew your subscriptions (17 Euros per annum).

The 2004 Subscription is now due!!

Please contact the HELAAS Treasurer:
Dr Zoe Detsi-Diamanti detsi@enl.auth.gr

For change of contact details or email, please get in touch with the HELAAS Secretary:
Dr Tatiani Rapatzikou trapatz@enl.auth.gr

Members’ Publications

